

$7500

PER YEAR

The amount the state pays to maintain the Kansas Child Death Review Board database, which is aging and outdated and experiences frequent problems.

43

The number of states that use the free-of-charge Child Death Review Case Reporting System, a national standardized database. Kansas isn't one of them.

$0

The cost to the state of Kansas to participate in the national database.

391

THE NUMBER OF CHILDREN WHO DIED IN KANSAS IN 2011.

Senate Bill 259 will give researchers and public health officials access to a highly secure national database with de-identified Kansas Child Death Review Board records so we can make our state a safer place for children to grow up. This simple change will cost taxpayers nothing.
